Learners working independently

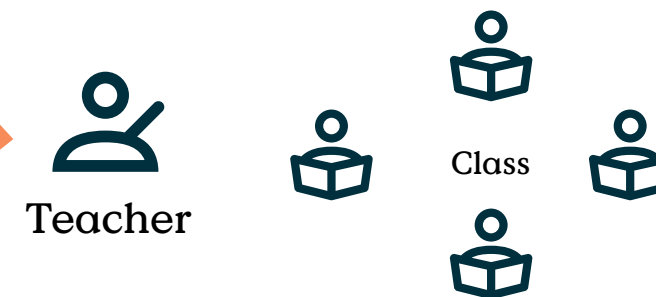

Teacher

Learners can work independently by activating the code of their course, if the institution or teacher is not prepared to create and manage classes yet. This allows them to practise at their own pace.

Teachers can create a class and ask learners to join it to monitor their progress at any time, converting independent learners into a class.

Learners working in a class

Teacher

Teachers have access to all the features that are necessary to manage their own classes, such as:

- Creating classes (up to 5 products).
- Registering students by sharing the class key or inviting them to join the class.
- Creating assignments and monitoring students' work in detail, grading and providing feedback on productive activities.
- Contacting students and sharing documents through the announcements board.
- Creating reports.

Administrators are an optional figure who manages the whole school: classes, teachers, students, and products, to save on school admin hours.

This includes:

- Granting or removing admin rights
- Bulk actions: enrolment, creating classes, activating products, custom grading...
- Creating customisable reports
- Creating children accounts

Working in classes

What is a class in Cambridge One?

A class is a group of learners who are working through the same materials (up to 5 products) at the same speed and at the same time.

A class may consist of just a single learner or as many as 100 learners.

A class can have just one teacher, but can also add more, if necessary, up to a maximum number of 10 teachers per class.

What are the advantages of working with classes?

Assignments

Teachers can set assignments for the whole class quickly and easily.

- Learners are motivated to take control of their own learning.
- Teachers ensure their learners have completed a particular task before the next face-to-face lesson.

Tracking progress and assessment reports

Teachers can evaluate students' progress both individually and collectively and identify any problems they might have.

Reports
