A: Let's go out later.

B: No, I can't. If I go out, I won't finish my homework, and we've got a Biology test tomorrow.

A: If you don't have a break, you won't study well because you'll be too tired.

B: Well, I probably will have a break, but a short one. We can go out tomorrow night.

A: I don't know if I'm free tomorrow. I won't be free if my uncle comes to dinner.

B: Well, if he doesn't come, call me.

A: I'll call you in the afternoon when I know. Will you be upset if you don't do well in the test tomorrow?

B: Yes, I'm really interested in Biology.

2

A: Can you think of a word that means 'really tired'?

B: Yes, 'exhausted'.

A: Can you think of an activity that's exhausting?

B: Yes, washing dad's car.

A: And what do you do when you're exhausted?

B: I go to bed and sleep for ten hours. Can you name someone who is annoying?

A: Yes, my little brother.

B: So what do you do when you're annoyed?

A: I listen to music on my MP3 player. What do you do when you're bored?

B: I yawn and start to daydream.

3

A: Look at that man up there. What's he doing?

B: He's cleaning the windows. He's a window cleaner.

A: You have to be brave to do that. If he falls he'll die.

B: Yes, but he won't fall. He's got a rope.

A: He'll fall if the rope breaks.

B: That's true. But I think there are more dangerous jobs than window cleaning.

A: Yes, fire fighting, for example.

B: That's a good example. Fire fighters sometimes die when they're trying to help people.

A: Yes, I agree – they have to be brave. What about a stuntman? He has to do some very dangerous things.

B: That's right. If he doesn't do dangerous things, he won't earn any money!

4

A: Listen, we need someone to play the piano at the school concert. Can you do it?

B: Me? I can't do that!

A: Why not? You play the piano really well.

B: Thanks, but I'm not brave enough to play in front of everyone.

A: You mean you're chicken.

B: I beg your pardon?

A: It means you're scared. That's pathetic!

B: Look, I can't do it and that's that.
