- A: Where did your parents first meet?
B: They met in London in 1995.
A: What were they doing there?
B: They were studying English in a language school.
A: Did they fall in love immediately?
B: Yes, I think so. They got engaged after six months.
A: How long did they go out before they got married?
B: About a year.
A: Have they ever broken up?
B: Yes, they broke up for a month once, but then they got back together.
A: Do you know anyone who has got divorced?
B: Yes, my uncle is divorced. But he's got another girlfriend now.
A: I hope they're happy together.

- A: My sister asked me if she could borrow my new dress to go out last night.
B: Really? Did you agree to let her wear it?
A: Yes, she begged me to lend it to her. She explained that she wanted to meet a boy.
B: Did you make her promise to do something for you in return?
A: Yes, she said she would let me use her MP3 player.
B: Good! She usually refuses to do anything for you.
A: She apologized for being horrible to me last week as well.
B: I hope you told her to be more polite to your friends as well!
A: Yes, she even suggested going out together next Friday.
B: That's amazing! I'll come with you if you want.

- A: What does your father look like?
B: He's tall and well-built and he's clean shaven.
A: My father's medium height and plump and he hasn't got much hair.
B: What's his personality like?
A: He's very ambitious and a bit bad-tempered.
B: What do you like about your mother?
A: She's very patient and considerate.
B: What don't you like about your mother?
A: She's a bit bossy.
B: So is mine.

- A: What's the matter with you? You look angry.
B: I've just had an argument with my boyfriend.
A: Have you broken up?
B: No, but I'm really angry with him.
A: How long have you been going out?
B: We've been together for two years now.
A: What did he say to make you angry?
B: He said that he didn't like my hair.
A: I think your hair's lovely. I wish I had curly hair like you.
B: Well, my boyfriend wants me to have it cut short.
