A: Look at that instrument over there. I wonder what it is.
B: That? That's a hosho.
A: Do you know where it comes from?
B: It comes from Zimbabwe.
A: I don't even know where Zimbabwe is.
B: It's just above South Africa.
A: I wonder what kind of instrument it is.
B: It's a percussion instrument.
A: Have you got any idea what it's made of?
B: It's made from the shell of a dried fruit known as a gourd.
A: Do you know exactly what's inside it?
B: It's full of dried seeds.
A: I wonder how you play it.
B: You shake it.
A: Could you tell me who it belongs to?
A: It belongs to Bill.

A: Can you play a musical instrument?
B: No, I started to learn the oboe when I was ten, but I gave it up.
A: That's a wind instrument, isn't it?
B: Yes, that's right.
A: If I could learn to play an instrument, I'd like to play the trumpet.
B: Why?
A: Because if I played the trumpet, I could join a jazz band.
B: If you asked your parents, they might buy you one for Christmas.
A: They might. But I can't afford to pay for lessons.
B: I wish I hadn't stopped playing the oboe now.
A: Would you like to play in an orchestra?
B: Yes. If I hadn't given it up, I might be really good now.
