

1 A and B are talking about snap judgements. Follow the prompts to write the dialogue.

A: Ask B what a snap judgement is.

B: Give details.

A: Ask B to give an example of when he/she makes a snap judgement.

B: Give details.

A: Give an example of when you make a split-second decision.

B: Ask A if he/she thinks that we make the right decisions when we make snap decisions.

A: Give details.

B: Ask A to give an example of someone jumping to the wrong conclusion.

A: Give details.

End the dialogue in a suitable way.

2 Follow the prompts to write the dialogue. Then practise reading it aloud with a partner.

A: What happened to you yesterday? I thought you / come and see me.

B: Yes, sorry, I had a few problems.

A: You should / phone.

B: I / phone you, but I forgot. I was visiting my sister in hospital.

A: You told me she / have a baby. Has she had it?

B: No, there are complications and the doctor decided it / be better for her to stay in hospital.

A: Is she alright?

B: She's upset because she thought having a baby / be easier.

A: Anyway, I went to the cinema with Nick in the end.

B: Great! I knew you / find something to do without me.

3 A and B are talking about making important decisions. Follow the prompts to write the dialogue.

A: Ask B what is the most important decision he/she has ever made.

B: Give details.

A: Ask if he/she made the decision on his/her own or if he/she asked other people for advice.

B: Give details.

A: Ask whether he/she took a long time to make up his/her mind.

B: Give details.

A: Ask if he/she thinks he/she made the right decision.

B: Give details.

A: Ask how his/her life would be different now if he/she had made a different decision.

B: Give details. Ask A the same questions.

4 A is doing a survey of cyclists' opinions. Follow the prompts to write the dialogue.

A: Ask B if you can ask him/her a few questions.

B: Say you're in a hurry.

A: Say that it will only take a few minutes.

B: Agree and ask what A wants to know.

A: Ask if B uses his/her bicycle every day.

B: Give details.

A: Ask if B is satisfied with the cycle lanes in the town.

B: Give details.

A: Ask B what improvements could be made for cyclists.

B: Give details.

End the dialogue in a suitable way.