A travel review website

1 Work in pairs. Look at the picture. What are the people doing? How do you think they feel?

2 Read the travel review quickly and check your ideas in Exercise 1.

Lanjarón is one of the places where people live longest in the world. This could be because of the village's excellent spring water.

3 Read the review again. Match the sentences to the people, Lucy (L), Gorka (G) and Marcie (M).

Which person

- 1 arrived at the festival without something?
- 2 already knew something about Lanjarón before they visited?
- 3 talks about the beginning, middle and end of the festival?
- 4 has some advice about the water?
- 5 learned something from one of the villagers?
- 6 says how they learned about the festival?

What to do

Food and drink

Do you want to get wet? Really, really wet? Then don't miss the Carrera del Agua de Lanjarón, Andalusia's wettest festival. Every year on the night of June 23rd to 24th, around 20,000 people fill the streets of this pretty village and take part in a huge water fight. Read our travellers' reviews here.

Lucy, Manchester

When my friend told me about the water fight, I just knew I had to go. He said he'd had an incredible time there, and I can understand why – it's wonderful. It starts with a single firework, and then for about an hour everybody throws or sprays water over everyone, on the street or from balconies, using buckets, hoses or water pistols. After it's finished, all these very wet people eat, drink and party all night. If you're in Andalusia in June, go!

Gorka, Bilbao

I'd heard about Lanjarón before I went because it's famous for its spring water, but I had no idea that the villagers like to spray people with it as well as drink it! I really recommend the Carrera del Agua. The atmosphere is amazing. Everyone laughs so much. But be prepared – if you go, you'll definitely get wet and the water is really cold. Some people even wear swimming costumes!

Marcie, Seattle

My husband and I loved this festival. It's really simple but lots of fun, just thousands of people having a crazy water fight. We hadn't brought water pistols with us, but it wasn't a problem because there were shops and stalls selling them everywhere. The next day, an old man who lives there told us that people had thrown about a million litres of water during the festival. People say the water brings good luck. That's a lot of good luck!

Q We are moving to Andalusia soon and we aren't sure what kind of school to send our daughter to. She's 12 in June, so she will be starting secondary school in September. How long would it take her to learn Spanish? Should we consider a Spanish school or an international school and what are the differences? Thanks.

Miriam

A It depends on how long you're planning to stay. We decided to send our son to an international school because we won't be staying in Spain very long (in my job I have to move every few years). The school we chose offers the English National Curriculum, and pupils take GCSE exams at 16 and A-level exams at 18, the same as pupils in the UK, so it's easier if they want to go to university there. All the lessons are in English too. Hope this helps!

Cristina

A I think this is a great opportunity for your daughter to learn Spanish! Here in Andalusia we now have some bilingual secondary schools (you can find them online). They teach some classes in English, and some in Spanish. I'm a teacher in one – I teach science in English. My school also offers new students extra help with their Spanish or English. In six months she should be able to speak great Spanish!

Simon

A In Andalusia there are many excellent private schools. They follow the Spanish curriculum. Students are allowed to study for either the Spanish or the international Baccalaureate after they finish compulsory education at age 16. In several schools students can learn three or four languages as well. You'll need to get a list of schools from your local council. Then go on the school websites to arrange a visit. I'm sure you'll find one your daughter will like. Good luck!

4 What are railway paths?

Escape from the crowds

A Are you someone who is looking for something more active than lying on the beach? Would you like something that is quieter than a city full of tourists? Come and walk or cycle along one of the beautiful railway paths (vías verdes) of Andalusia. They are a great way to discover the countryside and escape from the crowds.

B The railway paths are all old railways lines. The government closed many of them in the 1960s, but since 1993, it has been transforming them into paths for walkers and cyclists. They are often a long way from towns and roads, and no motorised vehicles can use them. Because they were for trains, they are relatively flat. They also include many spectacular viaducts and tunnels. The Vía Verde Olvera, for example, has 30 tunnels, including one over 900 metres long. Not all the tunnels have light so it's a good idea to bring a torch. Each route has the kilometres clearly marked. The shortest is 6 km and the longest 91 km, so there is a route for everyone! You can stop at the old railway stations, too. These are now restaurants or bars. There are also picnic tables and places where you have fantastic views of the countryside.

C Each route has its own unique history. Whatever route you choose, on your journey, you will be learning about the economic and social changes in that area. All of the routes have information boards, and there are often visitor centres and museums along the way.

D See www.andalusia.com or any tourist information centre for maps and more details. As well as your boots or a mountain bike, bring some friends. You're going to have a great time!

Andaluz Fashion

When tourists think of Andalusian fashion, they probably think of flamenco dresses. But I have visited Andalusia recently and I saw a lot more variety, with exciting clothes and young designers.

In September, I went to the latest edition of Malaga Fashion Week (it's actually two days!). It's an unusual show because it happens in the street, Marqués de Larios Street (just Larios to the locals), in the heart of Malaga. The catwalk is actually a blue carpet right along the street. It's 350 metres long and the longest catwalk in Europe.

Malaga Fashion Week has been happening since 2011, with the aim of promoting local talent and encouraging the development of fashion design on the Costa del Sol. As well as designers and models it also involves stylists, photographers and make-up artists. The first day of the show focuses on local designers who exhibit their ready-to-wear collections, everything from swimwear to wedding dresses. The second day is for haute-couture by with famous designers. Malaga Fashion Week has become very popular, and now attracts 15,000 visitors each day.

Some young Andalusian designers have become successful internationally. One of these is Claudina Mata. She was born near Jaén, studied Fashion Design in Seville and now has her own studio in Granada. She has won fashion awards in Andalusia, Barcelona and Madrid, and she has also worked as a TV reporter! Another young designer, Juana Martín from Córdoba, combines modern designs with more traditional flamenco outfits. She shows her traditional collections at the annual International Flamenco Fashion Show in Seville (SIMOF). Designers have been presenting the latest trends in flamenco clothing at SIMOF for over 20 years. Famous international fashion houses, from Yves Saint Laurent to Tom Ford, have also included flamenco styles in their work. I hope to return to Andalusia next year to see SIMOF for myself!

My high school exchange in Seville

Day 1 Saturday Hi everyone! I'm too tired to write much today because I've just arrived, but my host family – Mr and Mrs Ruiz and their daughter Helena – seem very nice. I'm looking forward to my week here!

Day 2 Sunday The family showed me around Seville today. The streets and the buildings are beautiful, but I was quite embarrassed when we got to the Giralda Tower and Mrs Ruiz said, 'I believe you have a copy of that tower in Kansas.' She meant the one in the Country Club Plaza, of course, but I'd always thought our tower was the original!

Day 3 Monday My first day at a Spanish school! I'm in the same class as Helena. Everyone is friendly and wants to talk to me. Their English is better than my Spanish, but I'm trying out the phrases I know. It's very different to an American school. For example, they wear a uniform. I didn't use to think uniforms were a good idea, but the ones here look pretty good.

Day 4 Tuesday Today I gave a presentation about Kansas to my classmates. I explained that Kansas and Seville have been sister cities since 1967. That's why there's a Kansas Avenue here. They had lots of questions. I hope I answered them OK.

Day 5 Wednesday This morning, I lost my phone cable and the adapter for my US plug. Mr Ruiz was very kind and took me to a shop to buy new ones. Gracias, Mr Ruiz! I can't do without my phone!

Day 6 Thursday Today we went to a flamenco show. I'd never seen flamenco live. I loved it! It's so passionate. In fact, I think I'm going to sign up for classes when I get home. After the show, we had dinner. People eat really late here. By the time we got to the restaurant, it had already got dark!

Day 7 Friday Today I said goodbye my classmates and tomorrow I say goodbye to the Ruiz family. It's been an incredible week. I love the city and I've made some friends for life. I used to want to go to university in the States, but now I'd love to move to Seville to study.

Amazing tapas from Andalusia

This week I visited Southern Andalusia, famous for its tapas. Many of them involve fried seafood, like calamar, and I can understand why. I'm not usually a fan of fried food, but I have to say that all my favourite snacks here were fried! Maybe it's the olive oil, or the perfect combination of flavours that make these tapas so delicious. Anyway, here are my top three.

Number one, ortiguillas de mar, are the most unusual. I tried these at a beach restaurant in the province of Cádiz, where they are very popular. At first, I wasn't sure exactly what I was eating, because it looked a bit like seaweed but tasted like an oyster. I discovered they were sea anemones and they are related to both jellyfish and coral. In the sea they look like flowers, with a round body and tentacles, but they eat other marine life. To cook them, you put them in flour and fry them for a couple of minutes. The tentacles are crunchy, and the soft body has an intense flavour of the sea. A unique experience and one I'm going to repeat!

Another tapa I loved is also from the area around Cádiz. It is a kind of pancake called tortillita de camarones. Camarones are tiny shrimp which are found in marshes and salt ponds along the Cádiz coast near San Fernando. The basic ingredients of the pancake are a batter of flour and water, with whole shrimp and chopped onion. The best tortillitas I ate had kombu seaweed in them. I think I'll try to make them at home.

Finally, something quite different from Marbella: croquetas de puchero. Puchero is a kind of soup, usually made with chicken and ham, boiled with vegetables. The croquetas are made with meat left over from the soup, and what made me love them

4 Can you guess what jobs these people do?

1

I have to get up early and walk from street to street. My bag gets lighter as I work. I must make sure the people who live in the houses get the things that others have sent them.

2

If you need some information, I have to know where to find it. I have to put a lot of books on shelves, and sometimes I need to tell people that they mustn't speak loudly.

I must be ready to work in dangerous situations. I have to be strong and healthy and I mustn't panic. I have to wear special clothes to protect me.

Now write a similar description of a job for your partner to guess.
Use (don't) have to, (don't) need to and must/mustn't.

- famous men/women (?) wives/husbands are also famous. (3 points per couple)
- countries (?) English is spoken. (1 point per country)
- special occasions (?) people don't work or go to school. (2 points per occasion)

8–14 points: not bad 15–21 points: very good 22 points or more: excellent!

1 Four pairs of friends have opposite fashion styles. Can you work out who the pairs of friends are?

Mark loves baggy shirts and extra-large t-shirts. His friends say he looks like a Jane's clothes are always colourful and have the company name on them.

Tomas always wears the same thing: plain black jeans and plain white t-shirts without any writing.

Ricardo always wears tight clothes. He thinks it's fashionable to wear things one size too small.

Tania thinks high-heeled shoes are really uncomfortable. She has a pair but never wears them. She prefers very casual clothes.

Hilary wears long-sleeved clothes all the time, even in summer. She prefers flowery patterns to spotted or striped ones.

Brittany likes to wear long-sleeved dresses with black high-heeled shoes, even just to hang out with friends.

Everything in Jeff's wardrobe is striped and most of his t-shirts don't have sleeves.

2 Find verbs related to clothes in the word snake. The vowels have been changed to numbers. Which number is which vowel? Which verb is repeated? 1 = e

2 What am I? Can you work out these riddles?

- 1 I have lots of little buttons but no display.
People use me to change the channel.
- 2 People use me at night, but not when it's cloudy. I'm long and have at least two lenses. I make distant things look bigger.
- 3 I usually have at least four buttons, one to close and one to open the door, one to go up and one to go down. I usually have a display as well.
- 4 I have two handles, but you carry me in one hand. You get me when you go shopping.
- 5 Sometimes I have a cable and a plug, but I'm usually not electric. I often have a strap to help you hold me when you play me standing up.
- 6 I used to have lots of keys on the front.
Now I only have one or two buttons on the top or the side. Many people use covers to protect my screen.
