

I can develop emotions in the classroom by...

oo

creating opportunities to talk about them

I can develop emotions by motivating & engaging sts.

listening to them;
Giving them positive
feedback

I can develop
emotions in the classroom by choosing controversial topics to debate about.

Showing my own feelings!

touching my
students' hearts,
teaching them to appreciate the learning

... asking them how do they feel.

...paying attention
to how my students feel.

... Showing a photo
of my family.

I CAN DEVELOP EMOTIONS
IN THE CLASSROOM
by sharing experiences

I can develop
emotions in the classroom by paying attention
to details.

... showing who
I REALLY am:

Showing students
I care.

making a roleplay with students

being human!

Sharing my personal experience
with them;
bonding...

Really listening
to my students!

Reading stories

Showing my ~~child~~ emotions and being myself.

...by giving the students the time they need to express themselves

engaging with students

singing different version of "if you're (happy, happy, happy) ...
(jump!) ...

trying to understand
each one of my students

(...)
establishing a open,
relaxed and affective
relationship with my students.

Showing Students'
my own emotions

listening to the students.

being a better
listener!
☺

Asking students how they felt about a specific situation.

MAKING MY STUDENTS
FEEL I CARE!

building an honest relationship with the students from the outset

... showing
different faces (I do it all the time)

(students)
... showing them a video and asking them to reflect on what/how they would feel in that situation.

having some relaxing activities

... TAKING A BIT OF EXTRA
TIME TO LISTEN.

telling a joke

... knowing
who my students are as individuals.

saying how I feel (with a drawing, a picture, music)
and encouraging
students to do the same.

-by asking some questions:

- Is everything ok?
- Do you need some minutes to breathe?

... bonding and
giving feedback
on their sharing

asking my students questions that show that I care.

putting myself in the student's shoes!

SPEND THE FIRST 5
MINUTES OF THE CLASS TALKING WITH STUDENTS — How THEIR DAY is going etc,

... asking Ss how they feel and actually listen to them.

encouraging
them.

giving what I expect to receive!
