The Collaborative Learner

As an English teacher, you are probably very familiar with getting your learners to work together. This session will look at why collaboration is critical for lifelong learning and how we can improve our learners' productivity and success through collaborative learning activities. We will investigate what collaboration really means and explore some different strategies for improving collaborative participation, while making sure our learners are getting the necessary practice for their exams.

Speakers

Mark Meredith

Mark began teaching English in Spain in 2010. He holds a Trinity DipTESOL and is currently a Teacher Trainer for Cambridge University Press Iberia. Since arriving in Spain he has taught primary and secondary students, future university students on pre-session courses and has run a variety of professional English courses for adults. Apart from this he also set up his own language tuition centre, taught in private academies and worked online as a coach for Rosetta Stone.

George Heritage

George joined the Cambridge English Assessment Services department in Madrid at the beginning of March 2016, after working in Cambridge for 3 years on a variety of exams. Prior to that, he taught a variety of levels and ages in Spain, Portugal, Brazil, Costa Rica and the UK for nearly ten years. He holds a degree in Spanish and Portuguese and a Cambridge English CELTA.
